MATRIMONIAL.

BURRIS-CLARKE.

—At the residence of the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. John Burris, near Little Rock, this county, at 2 o'clock p. m. Miss Irene Boardman Burris, was united in marriage to Mr. William Troupe Clarke. The ceremony was pronounced by Elder L. H. Reynolds, after which the happy couple left for a bridal trip to the Jamestown Exposition. The bride is one of Bourbon's pretty and attractive young woman, while the groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Clarke, and a successful young farmer. The attendants were Miss Annie Burris, a sister of the bride, and Mr. Irvin Soper.

HOLT-MULLEN.

A quiet, plain, yet beautiful wedding was that solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Holt, on Mt. Airy avenue, on Wednesday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, when Miss Rebecca Gay Holt and Mr. James P. Mullen were united in the holy bonds of wedlock by Rev. Father O'Neil, of Frankfort.

The house was tastefully decorated with beautiful flowers and plants. Only the immediate families of the contracting parties and a few intimate friends and neighbors were present. The bride is one of Paris' fairest daughters, handsome, attractive and accomplished. The groom is a civil engineer and resides at Lexington, where he is very popular.

The bride was attired in a handsome traveling suit of blue broadcloth with hat and gloves to match, carrying bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

The presents were numerous and handsome. Immediately after the ceremony the couple left on the Louisville & Nashville train for bridal trip to Chicago, and upon their return will reside in Lexington.

LETTON-ANDERSON.

—Miss Laura Bass Letton and Dr. Bruce Anderson were united in marriage on Wednesday afternoon, at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. Jesse Letton, of near Millersburg. Elder J. D. Waters, of the Millersburg Christian church, officiating. It was a quiet but pretty wedding, the house being tastefully decorated with palms, ferns and Southern smilax. Miss Jessie Spencer, of Lexington, rendered a number of beautiful pieces of wedding music.

The bride was attractive in her wedding gown of white persian lawn elaborately trimmed in real lace, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. After the congratulations the wedding gown was changed for a traveling suit of blue cloth with hat and gloves to match. The happy couple drove to Paris where they boarded the 3:30 p. m. Louisville & Nashville train for a bridal trip to the East.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Letton, and one of Bourbon's handsomest young women. The groom is one of Paris' successful physicians, enjoying a lucrative practice.

—The following invitations have been issued: "Mr. William Henry Harrison Johnson requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of his daughter, Wilhurst, to Mr. Virgil Dawson Chandler, Wednesday afternoon, October thirtieth, nineteen hundred and seven at five o'clock, First Baptist church, Paris, Ky. Interview With Hon. J. Hal

Woodford.

"Mr. Woodford I notice a communication in Thursday's Lexington Leader signed 'Bourbon', a statement that you refused to pool your tobacco crops with the farmers of Bourbon county in the years 1906 and 1907, and that you discouraged the pooling of tobacco during those years. Have you anything to say about it?"

"I am not in the habit of answering anonymous communications, and do not like to get into a newspaper controversy, but as this is probably the beginning of a series of malicious attacks, I will tell you the fact. I did not raise any tobacco during the year 1906, and I promptly pooled every stalk I raised during the year 1907, and have not, in any way discouraged the movement for securing better prices for tobacco for the farmers of this county. I am a farmer and deeply interested in every movement that promises better prices for our farm products."

"How about your refusing to take stock in the Bourbon Tobacco Warehouse Company?"

"If the matter was ever mentioned to me, which I do not recall, I did decline as I did not have any tobacco when the Warehouse Company was organized, and did not then expect to raise any. Besides, I was not then and never have been an investor. I have been a borrower and quite a large one for several years."

"How about refusing to pay for stock you subscribed for in Bourbon County Agricultural Society?"

"I subscribed for one share of stock in that enterprise merely as a compliment to the gentleman who brought the subscription paper to me, and have offered to take the same and have tendered the money to him in payment thereof."

"How about the political conditions in this county?"

"Oh, they are about normal, and the result on the day of election will disclose that fact to better advantage than any prophet can now foretell."

Important Decision.

The Court of Appeals last week in the case of the Commonwealth vs. R. N. Wathen from Marion county, decided that a depositor must pay taxes on his money in bank even if he does owe the bank; that until the bank makes demand to have the deposit credited on its notes and the money is so credited, the depositor must pay taxes on it, otherwise the money would be "nobody's money."

Willson Offers Insult to Great Nebraskan.

The Democratic press of Kentucky has very promptly called Augustus E. Willson on the carpet for his wanton slander upon William J. Bryan, the great leader of Democracy, whom he charged, came into Kentucky a week ago a hireling and went before the sixty thousand people who he addressed and urged to support Judge Hager and the Democratic State ticket, receiving therefor not less than five hundred dollars a day. When called to account for his statement, Mr. Willson squirmed out of it in these traddling fashion in which he has met the issues of the present campaign, and, when called a liar by Democratic State Campaign Chairman Hines and Urey Woodson, Democratic National Committeeman, admitted that he had made the charge without any information whatever, showing that he made it in pique, being at the time in the section Mr. Bryan had visited and seeing the wonderful effects of the speeches of the Nebraskan.

What a howl would go up from the Republican press not only of Kentucky, but of the entire Nation, should Judge Hager, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, make the charge in a public speech next week, when Vice President Fairbanks comes into Kentucky to speak in behalf of the Republican ticket, that he is receiving as compensation five hundred dollars a day, or any sum, for that service. Such a statement by Judge Hager would do inestimable harm to the cause of Democracy. Is there any more reason why such a statement from Mr. Willson regarding Mr. Bryan should not do the cause of Republicanism much harm? Does Mr. Fairbanks stand any higher in the estimation of the people of this country than does Mr. Bryan? Does anyone believe that he has the cause of Republicanism closer to heart than has Mr. Bryan the cause of Democracy? Will anyone claim that he has a more honest purpose in coming to Kentucky than had the man who has led the Democratic hosts in the nation for a dozen years or more?

The charge made by Mr. Willson, ridiculous in the extreme as it is, falls flat before all sensible and right thinking people. Instead of having the effect he supposed it would, it will injure his chances of being Governor of the Commonwealth. The people of Kentucky will resent the aspirations of a man whose stock in trade is the peddling of slanders, and they will be slow to believe any charge made by a man who wilfully and maliciously slanders such a man as William J. Bryan. The Republican campaign is being made wholly upon false charges, none of which have ever been proven, but up to the time Mr. Willson made this serious charge against the National leader of the Democracy he had left the dissemination of false charges to his associates, the candidates for minor offices of the Republican State ticket, especially to his candidate for Secretary of State.

On the day that Mr. Willson was making his charge against Mr. Bryan the distinguished Democratic leader was telling twelve thousand people, assembled at Murray, Calloway county, just why he paid a visit to Kentucky at this time. Said Mr. Bryan: "There is no more reason why I should leave my children good government than that you should leave your children good government; and there is no more reason why I should fight for Democracy than there is that you should fight for Democracy. My interest is not due to the fact that I have been a candidate for high office. My interest is not due to the fact that I may be a candidate for high office in the future, for office is but an incident of my life, and there are things which concern me more. I have never wanted office merely to hold office for I have long since learned that my place in history will not be determined by what people do for me, by what I can do for my people.

"I have said this much because I wanted to impress upon your minds that you ought to be as much interested as I am in this fight, and now, Democrats, if I will come from Nebraska at my own expense to help you win a victory in Kentucky for Democracy, can't you go from your homes to your polls on election day and do your part toward winning that victory? What excuse can you give your conscience or your neighbors if on election day you remain away from the polls? What excuse can you give to your conscience or your country if by any neglect of your's these principles which you hold dear are defeated, and simply through your failure to do what you can? Is it not worth your while to vote yourselves, and then do what you can to get your neighbors to join with you to make your majority larger?"

Does any one believe, even Mr. Willson, who made the charge, that the man who uttered those words lied to the sixty thousand people who heard him in Kentucky when he said that he came to Kentucky at his own expense for the purpose of rousing Democrats to action in the present fight for State offices. No, no one, not even Mr. Willson, believe such a thing, and the Republican gubernatorial nominee hasn't the manhood or the courage to stand up and admit that he has wantonly slandered one of the greatest men of the present day in America. Does anyone believe that a man who will make such a charge should be elevated to the high office of Governor of Kentucky?

Wake Up and Get Busy.

Do the Democrats think they can go calmly to sleep and carry Bourbon county for the ticket in November? If so, they are badly mistaken, and the sooner they realize this fact the better it will be for the party. We deem it our duty to urge the Democrats to not be caught napping. There is no doubt but what the Republicans are better organized for the coming election than they have been for any election in years. They seem confident of victory, and it is with the Democrats whether or not they will win.

There is no reason on the top of God's green earth for a Democrat to sulk because he was not for Beckham and Hager in the primary. This paper was against them to a finish, but after they received the nomination we tipped our hat to them and are now as strong for them, or in fact stronger than we were against them in the primary. If we were not for them now, we would not be a Democrat and if not a Democrat we would necessarily be a Republican, and God forbid such a calamity coming to our house.

If you vote for Willson you are not a Democrat and it is an insult to Democracy to call yourself one. Take your medicine, you grumbling Democrats, and go to work, how can you better matters by voting for a Republican.

With the State out of debt, a new capitol paid for, the penitentiaries more than self-sustaining, eleemosynary institutions on the highest plane of excellence, no fraud or graft, and with the present administration rounding out its term with over a million dollars in the treasury, what more do you want? Surely you do not want to exchange this for Republican promises? Wake up, and get busy.

Hobble Federal Judges.

The recent decision of Judge Lochren, of the United States Circuit Court, enjoining the officers of the State of Minnesota from enforcing the law of that State in regard to freight rates, adds a new chapter to the usurpation of Federal Court. It will no doubt have an effect contrary to what was intended by it. In fact, it will result in the introduction of bills at the next session of Congress for circumscribing the powers of Federal courts by depriving them of all authority to issue writs of injunction, habeas corpus, and prohibiting in cases wherein the law of a State is called in question. And it is not likely that such a measure may be enacted into law. In 1802 the Democrats, at Jefferson's suggestion abolished the Circuit Court of the United States created by the 6th Congress in February, 1801; and that precedent is receiving the attention of all Congressmen who favor the preservation of the reserved rights of the States and trial by jury. The next great struggle in this country will be like the first—a struggle against the usurpation of Federal judges, whom Jefferson so aptly described as the sappers and miners of despotism.

The Republican Voters Rebelled.

It looks as if Teddy was losing ground in his own State. At the recent primaries in Brooklyn, Mr. Roberts, President Roosevelt's postmaster of Brooklyn, was defeated, and Robert A. Sharkey, whom Mr. Roosevelt refused to reappoint as naval officer of the port of New York, won in his district. There was a good deal of clatter on the part of Woodruff and Roberts and Sharkey as to how the result was brought about. Chairman Woodruff issued a statement declaring that he had not interfered in the Sharkey district. The Sharkey people declared that he had. This is a pointer showing what may be expected in the Johnson-Burton fight in Cleveland, Ohio. The people almost always rebel against dictation from Federal officers, great or small.

Deserves Support.

The Democratic State ticket deserves the earnest and enthusiastic support of every Democrat in Kentucky. Every man on it is worth the confidence and respect of the citizens of the State. The head of the ticket, Judge S. W. Hager, has been Auditor for four years, and that office has been conducted in a manner that deserves the praise of all men who believe that public office should be conducted with the same fidelity and honesty that a good business man gives to his private affairs. Auditor Hager is confident that the more the people know of the business of the Auditor's office under him the better for the Democratic ticket and accordingly he welcomes the examination of his books, accounts, etc., by a Republican Committee. The more light is turned on the stronger becomes Hager's claims upon the confidence of the people of Kentucky.

Trying the Wrong Man.

An unusual verdict was rendered by the jury in a case tried in a California town a good many years ago. The question was as to the ownership of several head of cattle which the defendant was accused of having stolen from the plaintiff. As the case proceeded and different witnesses gave their evidence, it became apparent to all listeners that the defendant was an innocent man. When it came time for the jury to retire to consider their verdict, they did so, but returned to the courtroom in a few moments. The foreman looked the judge straight in the eye and said with a drawl and twang which betrayed his New England origin:

"Judge, we find the plaintiff guilty." "The court is not trying the plaintiff, but the defendant," said his honor hastily, and the matter being explained, the foreman was at length induced to express the jury's opinion that the defendant was not guilty.

"Howsomeyer," added the foreman solemnly, "pears to me we're considering the wrong man, your honor!"

Holy Land a World Center.

It used to be a fancy that the Holy Land was the center of the world. In a sense not then meant it was indeed central. It occupied a strategic position. Three continents converge here—all the continents known as the ancients—Asia, Africa and Europe. Contiguous to Palestine on the south lies Egypt and on the north Syria. Or, taking a wider view, on one side of it were India, Persia, Assyria and Babylonia, while on the other side of it were Egypt, Greece and Rome. A babe among giants the land of Jesus was indeed little among the geographical tribes; but, like a babe, it was monarch of the household of lands. From its central vantage tiny Palestine saw through the march of centuries the procession of these mighty empires—Assyrian, Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Greek and Roman, being itself during much of the time a center of influence and determining force that have helped form the character and history of the civilized world.—Exchange.

A Clash of Prayers.

Maggie, with her fair face and blond hair, and Nina, with dusky skin and kinky wool, had played together at mud pies and had swung on the same gate ever since they could remember. For Nina's mammy was Maggie's nurse, says the Housekeeper. They were now seven years old. Maggie loved Nina in spite of her color, yet she had a feeling that her friend deserved to be white, so she added to her prayer each night:

"Please, God, make Nina white."

As the weeks went by and Nina remained unchanged Maggie felt that her petition needed re-enforcement, so she confided in Nina, begging her to pray for the greatly desired bleaching. But Nina in surprise looked at Maggie with wide open eyes and exclaimed: "Me? No, sir-ee. Fo' de Lawd, Maggie, I doan want to be no white child, an' I's jes' prayin' with all my might for you to come black!"

The Intelligent Bird.

Two negroes in Washington were one heard discussing the intelligence of birds in general. "Birds is shore sensible," observed one ducky to the other. "Yo' kin learn them anything. I uster work for a lady that had one in a clock, an' when it was time to tell de time it uster come out an' say cuckoo jest as many times as de time was!" "Yo' doan say so?" asked the other negro incredulously. "Shore thing!" responded the first ducky. "But de mos' wonderful part was dat it was only a wooden bird too!"—Harper's Weekly.

THE WORLD'S DREAMERS.

Castles in the Air Always Precede Castles on the Earth.

Once when Emerson was in the company of men of affairs who had been discussing railroads, stocks and other business matters for some time he said, "Gentlemen, now let us discuss real things for awhile."

Emerson was called "the dreamer of dreamers" because he had the prophetic vision that saw the world that would be, the higher civilization to come. Tens of thousands of men and women today stand where he stood almost alone. Dreamers in this sense are true prophets. They see the civilization that will be long before it arrives.

It was such dreamers who saw the great metropolis of Chicago in a straggling Indian village, the Omahas, the Kansas Cities, the Denvers, the Salt Lake Cities, the Los Angeles and the San Franciscos many years before they arrived that made their existence possible.

It was such dreamers as Marshall Field, Joseph Leiter and Potter Palmer who saw in the ashes of the burned Chicago a new and glorified city, infinitely greater and grander than the old.

What a picture the dreamer Columbus presented as he went about exposed to continual scoffs and indignities, characterized as an adventurer, the very children, taught to regard him as a madman, pointing to their forebears as he passed! He dreamed of a world beyond the seas, and in spite of unspeakable obstacles his visions became a glorious reality.

He died a neglected beggar, although his dreams had enriched the world, while a pickle dealer of Seville gave his name to the mighty continent Columbus had discovered. But was this Genoese dreamer a failure? Ask more than a hundred million people who inhabit the vast wilderness, the greatest continent the sun ever shone upon, if this dreamer was a failure.

Our public parks, our art galleries, our great institutions, are dotted with monuments and statues which the world has built to its dreamers—men and women who dreamed of better things, better days for the human race.

Take the dreamers out of the world's history and who would care to read it?

The most of the things which make life worth living, which have emancipated man from drudgery and lifted him above commonness and ugliness—the great amenities of life we owe to our dreamers.

Our visions do not mock us. They are evidences of what is to be, the forebodings of possible realities. The castle in the air always precedes the castle on the earth.—Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine.

When the Flag Is Half Mast.

Statesmen who approach the capitol daily to begin their work of lawmaking shudder and wonder when they see the flag at each end of the building at half mast. It is a sign that death has claimed one of their number since the last session. Usually they have not heard of the illness of the man in whose honor the colors are dropped. At any rate, few of them have. It is only the mighty among them whose sickness is generally known. As a rule, the first inquiry addressed by the statesman to himself when he observes the half masted ensign is as to whether the man who had been called to his reward was a member of his own branch, whether of the senate or the house. Then the startled statesman begins to run over the names of the oldest members of his branch, for invariably he is certain that death has called the aged and infirm. It seldom happens, however, that the victim was burdened with years. Somehow it seems that it is the young and vigorous body that is taken.—Washington Herald.

Man's Weakness.

Human weaknesses have had the sympathy of all ages, from the right sort of sinner, and one of the many stories related of the great eastern wit, Nasr-eddin-Hodja, illustrates this truth. A company of men were confessing their weaknesses—some of them harmless, some of them the opposite. One, however—he was very young—declared he had none. "I neither smoke nor drink," he said. "I do not keep late hours. I never lose my temper. I am not dissipated." This had a chilling effect upon the company, and everybody was glad of the diversion when a poor man rushed in upon them, beating his breast and showing other "Arabian Nights" signs of being in deep distress. "I have lost my donkey. Allah, Allah, what shall I do?" he wailed. "Here, we can help you," said Nasr-eddin-Hodja, pointing to the young man with no weaknesses, "take him. You will never find a bigger donkey."—London Chronicle.

Patenting a Hole.

"The queerest patent?" said the attorney. "Well, the queerest patent I know of was the patent of a hole. An old farmer out St. Louis was patented a hole, and, what is more, he made a lot of money on it. Now, though, it isn't worth the paper it is written on. This farmer, one morning in the dim past went to wind his big silver turnip and found the key stuck full of dirt. He tried to dig the dirt out with a pin. No go.

"Consarn ye," he said, "I'll fix ye." "And he drilled a hole in the key and with a single breath blew out every bit of the dirt. He patented that hole. He built a factory, bought millions of keys and made holes for them. His plant turned out 27,500 holes a day. In fact, all the world used the farmer's watch keys, which were the only kind that would keep clean, and the old fellow got rich."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Strong Soup.

In the life of William Stokes, written by his son, it is told how Stokes was sent over to Dublin during the great famine to show the people how to make soup. Stokes asked a starving beggar why she did not go and get some of the soup that was being freely distributed.

"Soup, is it, your honor? Sure, it isn't soup at all!" "And what is it, then?" inquired Stokes. "It is nothin', your honor, but a quart of water boiled down to a pint to make it strong!"

This is the soup maigre which Hogarth caricatured in his picture of the French troops at Calais. — London Standard.

Mixed Liquors Barred.

Rory MacSnary was the village blacksmith and one of the most powerful singers in the choir of the kirk at Auchinclocher. To show off his voice to full advantage he would vary his style from bass to alto and from alto to treble in the same hymn.

The minister had long observed that Rory's methods were upsetting the general melody of the congregation's singing, and at length he resolved to bring the culprit to book.

"Hymn 34," he announced, "and a' thegither. And, Mr. MacSnary, if ye're tae sing tenor, sing tenor, or if ye're tae sing bass, sing bass, but we'll hae nae mair o' yer shandygaff!" — Dundee Advertiser.

The Reason.

All sorts and conditions of men have excellent reasons for their position in life. Illustrated Bits tells of a tramp who had no illusions about the cause of his own condition:

Mrs. Finehealth (at hotel entrance)—No. I have no money to spare for you. I do not see why an able-bodied man like you should go about begging.

Lazy Tramp—I s'pose, mum, it's fer about the same reason that a healthy woman like you boards at a hotel, instead of keeping house.

A Rebuff.

"Do you think your father would like me as a son-in-law?"

"Yes, I believe he would."

"Oh, joy! I"—

"Papa and I never agree about anything, you know."

Feminine Nerves.

There are nervous women; there are hypernervous women. But women so nervous that the continual rustle of a silk skirt makes them nervous—no, there are no women so nervous as that!

Error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it. — Jefferson.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75 cents. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Now I am getting $70 and have a promise for a raise on the 1st. I've got an elegant job in the Naval Bureau of the Navigation Department. Your school deserves the credit for my success."

Nursing Mothers and

Over-burdened Women

In all stations of life, whose vigor and vitality may have been undermined and broken down by over-work, exacting social duties, the too frequent bearing of children, or other causes, will find in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the most potent, invigorating restorative strength-giver ever devised for their special benefit. Nursing mothers will find it especially valuable in sustaining their strength for the child. Expectant mothers too will find it a priceless help to prepare the system for baby's coming and rendering the ordeal comparatively painless. It can do no harm in any state, or condition of the female system.

Delicate, nervous, weak women, who suffer from frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down distress low down in the abdomen, or from painful or irregular monthly periods, gnawing or distressed sensation in stomach, dizzy or faint spells, see imaginary specks or spots floating before eyes, have disagreeable, pelvic catarrhal drain, prolapsus, anteversion or retroversion or other displacements of womanly organs from weakness of parts' will, whether they experience many or only a few of the above symptoms, find relief and a permanent cure by using faithfully and fairly persistently Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This world-famed specific for woman's weaknesses and peculiar ailments is a pure glyceric extract of the choicest native, medicinal roots without a drop of alcohol in its make-up. All its ingredients are printed in plain English on its bottle wrapper and attested under oath.

Pierce thus invites the fullest investigation of his formula knowing that it will be found to contain only the best agents known to the most advanced medical science of all the different schools of practice for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments.

If you want to know more about the composition and professional endorsement of the "Favorite Prescription," send postal card request to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for his free booklet treating of same.

You can't afford to accept as a substitute for this remedy of known composition a secret nostrum of unknown composition. Don't do it.

What you call hard work, do other people call it hard work? The story that you are a hard worker; did you start it or was it started by other people?

Save This Anyway.

Here is a simple home-made mixture as given by an eminent authority on Kidney diseases, who makes the statement in a New York daily newspaper, that it will relieve almost any case of Kidney trouble if taken before the stage of Bright's disease. He states that such symptoms as lame back, pain in the side, frequent desire to urinate, especially at night; painful and discolored urination, are readily overcome. Here is the recipe; try it: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

A well-known druggist here in town is authority that these ingredients are all harmless and easily mixed at home by shaking well in a bottle. This mixture has a peculiar healing and soothing effect upon the entire Kidney and Urinary structure, and often overcomes the worst forms of Rheumatism in just a little while. This mixture is said to remove all blood disorders and cure the Rheumatism by forcing the kidneys to filter and strain from the blood and system all uric acid and foul, decomposed waste matter, which cause these afflictions. Try it if you aren't well. Save the prescription.

"Pneumonia's Deadly Work

had so seriously affected my right lung" writes, Mrs. Fannie Connor, of Rural Route 1 Georgetown, Tenn., "that I coughed continuously night and day and the neighbors predicted consumption—seemed inevitable, until my husband brought home a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, which in my case proved to be the only real cough cure and restorer of weak, sore lungs." When all other remedies utterly fail, you may still win in the battle against lung and throat troubles with New Discovery, the real cure. Guaranteed by Oberdorfer, the druggist. 50c and $1.00. No Crop For 1908.

There is a strong feeling in the Society of Equity in favor of raising a crop of tobacco in 1908. Hon. Walter Sharp made a speech last Tuesday afternoon at Winchester in which he said, that with the crops of 1906 and 1907 still on hand and a big crop set in 1908, it would be impossible to pool it or to finance it if it could be pooled. He furthermore said that the mere contemplation of a big crop then militated greatly against the sale of the crops now on hand. This feeling is widespread, and if the members of the Society of Equity refrain from planting a crop in 1908 it will show the Trust that the Society is in earnest in its fight and has not only the determination to win, but the power to do so. There is another phase of the matter however, which it might be well to consider. Human nature is such that many men are willing to better their own condition at the expense of their fellowmen, and if they find out that their neighbors will plant no tobacco they will plant as large a crop as they can. In such cases we believe such schemes have been witnessed in the dark tobacco sections will be renailed here. The Equity men are in no humor for fooling and, which the Society as a whole will not tolerate lawlessness, some of its members will not be so scrupulous and the destruction of plant beds and personal violence will be almost inevitable.

No man can become a leader in a reform unless his heart is first captured. No one appreciates the freedom with which people talk behind his back."

Heirs Reach an Agreement.

The heirs of the late Sam Bagge reached an agreement late Monday evening in the law office of the Hon. C. M. Thomas, who was the committee of the deceased. The substance of the settlement is as follows: The will of the deceased made in 1888 will be presented to the county court for probate. By its terms Mrs. Hester Penn, wife of Lee Penn, was the sole beneficiary. According to the terms of settlement, James Bagge will receive $1,500 in cash. Mrs. Emma Carpenter, a sister of the deceased, will receive the interest annually as long as she lives from the sum of $1,000, which is to be set aside for that purpose and at her death it is to revert to James Bagge or his heirs. Miss Annie Bagge is likewise to receive the income from $1,500 as long as she survives and upon her death the principal is to revert to Mrs. Penn or her heirs. Lee Penn is mentioned in the will as executor of the estate, the court being requested to require no bond. The estate consists of 83 acres of valuable land, nearly $6,000 in cash and some personal property. The document was signed by all the heirs of the will and was sent to June, Alaska, to be signed by Edgar T. Penn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Penn.

THEATRICAL.

MONARCH STOCK COMPANY.

The Monarch Stock Company which opens an engagement for three nights at the Paris Grand commencing Monday, Oct. 21 is built on lines entirely at variance with all other popular prices road attractions. Instead of being composed of one or two principal members, usually characterized as "stars," this attraction comprises a list of people of a superlative degree of comparable ability, who vie with one another for supremacy. Besides possessing a superior conception of artistic ideas, the company, in an entirety, strikes the theatre-goers with an impression of gentility, refinement and good looks. Those who delight in feminine beauty will be charmed, while the admirers of the tall, good looking and athletic will be content. Special attention has been accorded the selection of vaudeville features between acts.

CALVE AT LEXINGTON.

Madame Emma Calve, world famous soprano, idol of a score of countries and most individual of all the great singers who comes to the Lexington Opera House is the greatest actress upon the operatic stage. Recognized throughout the civilized world as the possessor of one of the most glorious voices with which human being was ever endowed, she is also recognized as the most consummate actress upon the operatic stage. Many critics have declared that she has few equals upon the dramatic stage of any country as a player of parts, as a keen observer of life and character and as a portrayer of vividly emotional roles. She herself has often declared that she is an actress by instinct and a singer by accident. She was actually studying for the dramatic stage when someone discovered that she had a voice and turned her in the other direction.

The scale of prices are Lower floor $2.50 and $3.00, Balcony $1.50—$2.00 and $2.50 Gallery $1.00. Orders for seats sent to Manager Charles Scott will receive prompt attention.

Meeting of D. of C.

The Richard Hawes Chapter U. D. C. was charmingly entertained by Mrs. Sara Short, at her home on Main street Tuesday afternoon. Quite a large number were present. Mrs. Neely, the President, gave an excellent report of last year's work and outlined the work the chapter will undertake the coming year. The business of the meeting was then taken up, and it was found that after all the bills, incidental to the Convention held last week, were paid, there was money left in the treasury. This is certainly a credit to the chapter, as the visiting delegates were loud in their praises of the entertainment they received, many of them saying this convention was the most successful, in every detail, of any they had ever attended.

The various committees are to be congratulated on their splendid management.

The election of officers was held at this meeting with the following result: President, Mrs. R. J. Neely; First Vice President, Mrs. Russell Mann; Second Vice President, Mrs. Amos Turney; Secretary, Mrs. C. C. Leet; Treasurer, Mrs. W. O. Hinton; Registrar, Mrs. John Connell.

The retiring officers were the Vice President, Mrs. Keller, the Secretary, Mrs. Harry Clay and the Treasurer, Miss Annie May, each one of whom served the chapter most efficiently.

Mrs. Barnes, daughter of the hostess, on behalf of the School Improvement League of Bourbon county, made a very earnest plea that the chapter adopt one of the country schools and do all in its power to advance the interests of that school. This was very favorably considered, with the result that the chapter adopted District No. 44 of which Mrs. Albert Mitchell is the faithful trustee, and Miss Josie Alexander the efficient teacher.

When the business of the meeting was completed, the guests were served with a delicious lunch, after which they adjourned, each one feeling that she had enjoyed a pleasant privilege in meeting with Mrs. Short, one whom all delight to honor.

The Hamilton Farm Suit Sensational.

The suit to dissolve the Hamilton Farm Company of Montgomery county, for years one of the biggest concerns in eastern or Central Kentucky, promises to be a sensational one and provide long litigation. Sensational charges are made and there is no telling what the outcome will be. W. C. Jackson, administrator of Mrs. Sarah Hamilton, a stockholder, in his petition alleges:

"That notwithstanding the said corporation has endeavored in some manner to conduct and carry on the general business for which it was incorporated as above set out it has been from the beginning unsuccessful business and a losing venture to its stockholders; that it has never paid a dividend; that it has made no earnings; that it is now in debt, as plaintiff is informed, and believes and states to be true, in the sum of $50,000; that suits are being threatened by such creditors to enforce the demands against said company; that the defendant, Fannie Hamilton Brennan is charging in public and stating that the defendants, George G. Hamilton and J. C. Hamilton, who have had charge of said corporation's affairs since its first creation have mismanaged its affairs and have appropriated large portions of its assets to their own use; that she refuses to concur in any further proceedings of said corporation's affairs; that the said George G. and J. C. Hamilton, upon the other hand, are charging in public that the said acts of the said Brennan are destroying and have destroyed the usefulness of said corporation; that the said three owners of said majority of stock decline and refuse to co-operate in the management of said corporation and that the other defendants and said Mrs. Brennan are hostile to each other and that she refuses and declines to co-operate with them; that by reason of said facts the said corporation's affairs are unprofitable and that its assets will be sold at a sacrifice by its creditors and lost and the company thereby wrecked and the value of the property wholly or in greater part destroyed."

"Further, that said conditions and the said public charges by said majority stockholders and the said unprofitable condition of said corporation's affairs are destroying and have destroyed the value of the stockholdings of the various stockholders."

"That as aforesaid the defendants, George G. and J. C. Hamilton, have since the formation of said corporation had charge of the said affairs and assets of said corporation and that they failed and refused and have failed and refused to make any accounting whatever of their conduct of said affairs and the earnings, if any, the disposition thereof, the debts of said corporation and of the income, rents, profits, sales and the other financial affairs thereof since its incorporation; that said plaintiff and the other stockholders thereof are entitled to an accounting of and of their conduct of said corporation's affairs."

In his affidavit for a receiver Mr. Jackson alleges:

"That this plaintiff is interested in said corporation in that there came to his hands 190 shares of the capital stock of the defendant corporation and is therefore largely interested in the properties owned by said corporation; that the properties of said corporation are in great danger of being lost or materially injured by reason of the mismanagement of the affairs of said corporation by the officers of same; that although said corporation has existed for several years it has never paid a dividend to its stockholders; that its indebtedness has been increasing by reason of said mismanagement and nothing has been added to assets; that the stockholders of said corporation are at variance with each other as to the management of same and have publicly charged the officers with bad unfaithful management of its affairs and such charges have tended to destroy the credit of the corporation and prevent its being a successful business venture; that the president of said company has borrowed money on the faith and credit of the company and diverted the same to his private uses; that the company has large indebtedness and that said indebtedness will grow larger and cannot be reduced on account of the failure of the company to be made profitable; that the longer the company continues under its present management the less there will be for the stockholders in the final management of its affairs; that the officers of the company have permitted large judgements to be taken against it and have thereby destroyed its credit."

George H. Hamilton, president, in his answer makes a general denial of all charges, except that he borrowed money on the faith and credit of the company. The lands of the company or parts thereof are mortgage for about $35,000. There was an effort made to compromise the affairs and the parties were within $5,000 of a settlement, but now it will be settled in the courts. Mrs. J. M. Brennan, of Paris, claims $100,000 interest. The suit will be bitterly fought.

Mrs. J. M. Brennan says she never has been served with a process in the above action, nor has she made any statement in regard to the matter.

Charity has its genesis in the home, but its revelation comes on the outside.

ON THE FLORIDA SPECIAL.

By Philip Kean.

Copyrighted, 1907, by P. C. Eastment.

Miss Carstairs was not so old or so sophisticated that she was dead to the delights of having three bunches of violets, two boxes of candy and a bundle of magazines piled up on the seat next to her. Seemingly unconscious of the glances that had followed her as she came in, she nevertheless seated herself in her chair with the feeling that she was a person of importance and one whose popularity was evidenced by the number and value of her going away gifts.

As if the gods had not been good enough, however, just as the train pulled out and Richard Marston held her hand in a last farewell, the porter staggered in bearing a huge hamper, fruit filled and flower decorated, such a hamper as one sees only in the tropical paradise of millionaires.

Marston eyed it jealously.

"Such a display of money," he criticised.

"It's beautiful," Miss Carstairs assured him.

"Oh, well, my violets won't have a chance now," but it was a question rather than an assertion, and Miss Carstairs said, "How do you know?" And that was encouragement, or would have been from anybody but Miss Carstairs.

"I've half a mind to go on with you to Daytona," Marston hesitated, and Miss Carstairs said "Oh, do!" and that settled it. Marston went to find the conductor and get a chair, and as there wasn't any but the one next to Helen, the porter lifted the bunches of violets and the two boxes of candy and the hamper of fruit and the bundle of magazines and carried them to the end of the car and piled them where the passengers eyed them and then screwed their necks to get a better view of Miss Carstairs, all of which that young lady enjoyed as much as she enjoyed the distinction of having Richard Marston for a traveling companion.

"DON'T JOKE," HE SAID HOARSELY. "I AM PUNISHED ENOUGH."

"Think of my hobnobbing with a celebrity," she said.

"Of the making of books there is no end," Marston quoted sententiously.

"Think rather of my traveling with a beauty."

"And both of us as poor as poor," Helen sighed.

Marston looked at her. "I wonder why you say that?" he asked. "What difference does it make?"

Helen stared at him. "I thought"—she gasped.

"That I wanted to marry you," he finished for her. "But I don't!" and he settled back in his chair and looked out toward the line of the tropical shore, where a few coconut palms were silhouetted against a purple sea.

"Oh!" Helen's sense of importance had departed. Suddenly she felt immeasurably insignificant, but this feeling was succeeded by one of intense indignation.

"Of all things!" she ejaculated.

"Well, I know it's unusual for a man to withdraw a proposition of that kind in ten minutes, and I know I said some pretty insistent things just before the train left, but I've changed my mind. It's usually a woman's prerogative."

was his easy way of getting out of it, "but this time it's a man's, and I've changed my mind."

For the first time in her life Miss Carstairs could not meet the situation. She simply sat there with her cheeks burning and hated him.

Curiosity getting the better of her, however, she asked:

"But why?"

"That thing," Marston said succinctly and nodded toward the hamper. "To think you could take a thing like that from—Deering!"

Miss Carstairs felt better. She could meet jealousy.

"But I couldn't help it, could I?" was her innocent query. "I couldn't tell the porter to drop the basket on the platform."

"But I was so sure you had turned him down," Marston complained, "positively, you know—over at the Breakers last night, after the dance."

"I tried to—"

"And couldn't?"

She nodded.

"Too many inducements? Country house, town house, trips to Europe, diamonds—O Lord!" Marston groaned as he finished the catalogue.

"No." She turned from him to a contemplation of the scenery, and for a time they rode in silence, passing beyond the long line of palms to the orange groves—brilliant stretches of yellow and green that filled the car with the fragrance of wedding bouquets.

Suddenly Marston flung out, "What was it that kept you from turning him down positively, Helen?"

She leaned forward and spoke with conviction.

"I might do worse than marry Deering."

"A pork packer."

"It's better to marry a pork packer than to have nothing to pack," she informed him.

Marston fixed her with a stern eye.

"I tell you right now, Helen," he said, "that I won't run this race in competition with Deering. I don't trot in the same class. You can give him up or give me up."

Helen reached over and touched the electric bell. "Will you bring me some telegraph blanks?" she said to the porter when he came.

"And now will you lend me a pencil?" she asked Marston as she fluttered the leaves of the yellow pad.

"What are you going to do?" Marston questioned as he handed it to her.

"I am going to telegraph to Deering," she said. "I told him that I would say 'yes' or 'no' by telegraph."

Marston went white.

"Don't do anything rash, Helen," he warned.

"I shall do as I please," said Miss Carstairs, and he leaned back and snapped out, "Oh, of course."

She sat with the pencil poised. "I wish you'd toss a penny for me," she said at last. "Heads I do it—tails I don't."

"I will do nothing of the kind."

"Oh, well, don't!" She scribbled a hasty word and reached for the bell. But Marston stopped her. "What have you written?" he demanded sternly.

The other passengers were growing speculative as to the actions of the handsome young couple. Helen, suddenly conscious of their observation, commanded:

"Go up there and get me one of my boxes of candy and some fruit. People will think you are proposing to me."

"I am. Will you marry me, Helen?"

"Not until you get my candy."

He came back, staggering under Deering's hamper, and passed the porter going out, with a telegraph blank in his hand.

Marston dropped the hamper on the seat in front of Miss Carstairs and hurried after the porter.

And then Helen waited. A half hour passed—three-quarters. She grew worried. Did he care enough to hurt himself in any way? It wasn't like Richard to kill himself for disappointed love.

She rose and went through the train. The eyes of the other passengers followed her. She walked with ease and lightness, and from the topmost wave of her brown hair to the tip of her tan boots she was absolutely correct, modish, beautiful.

She found Marston on the observation platform, with his moody eyes fixed on the shining rails that seemed to slip from beneath the train to end in the sunset.

As she came up behind him she saw something in his face that touched her with tenderness. She dropped her hands on his shoulders. "Oh, little bad boy," she said, "you read the telegram!"

"Don't joke," he said hoarsely. "I am punished enough."

"If you had not been so—so impertinent," Miss Carstairs informed him, "I should have told you before that I promised Deering to wire whether I had decided to—to marry you, not whether I was going to marry him."

Marston gazed at her in a dazed way. "Then your 'yes' meant—"

"That I am going to marry you, little bad boy," said Miss Carstairs coolly.

A Horological Curiosity.

Japan possesses a remarkable timepiece. It is contained in a frame three feet wide and five feet long, representing a noontide landscape of great beauty. In the foreground plum and cherry trees and rich plants appear in full bloom. In the rear is seen a hill, gradual in ascent, from which apparently flows a cascade, admirably imitated in crystal. From this point a threadlike stream meanders, encircling rocks and islands in its windings, and finally losing itself in a faroff stretch of woodland. In a miniature sky a golden sun turns on a silver wire, striking the hours on silver gongs as it passes. Each hour is marked on the frame by a creeping tortoise, which serves the place of a hand. A bird of exquisite plumage warbles at the close of each hour, and as the song ceases, a mouse sallies forth from a neighboring grotto and, scampering over the hill to the garden, is soon lost to view.

Missed the Point.

"Professor," said an acquaintance, "you understand Latin, do you not?"

"Well," replied the professor, "I may be said to have a fair knowledge of Latin, yes."

"I know everybody says you have. I wish you would tell me what 'volix' means. Nobody that I have asked seems to have heard the word."

"If there is any such word as volix, madam, of which I have serious doubts, I certainly do not know what it means."

"You surprise me, professor. A man of your attainments ought to know that volix means Vol IX."

The professor devoted a moment to calling up his reserves and bringing his light artillery into action.

"It is no wonder, madam," he said, "that I did not see the point of your joke. You left the point out of it."—London Tit-Bits.

HER OWN SURGEON.

The Story of an Elephant With a Nail In Her Foot.

Paring the feet of most elephants is no more difficult than trimming the hoofs of a horse, says a writer in McClure's. The keeper simply prods his hook into an ankle. "Up," he says, and up comes the foot, measuring sometimes twenty inches across, as obediently as the dainty paw of a toy fox terrier. However, exactly like human beings, elephants have their weaknesses, and the old malodorous whiff of Jewel was that she wanted no one to tamper with her feet. She was a gentle, affectionate beast that would not think of hurting a flea, but where other elephants simply raised their feet and rested them on a box or a barrel until the keeper had finished with his knives and rasps and files Jewel would let out a scarp raising trumpet like the screech of a cracked bugle and would refuse to stand.

Jewel's keeper began to work, again and again coaxing up the great foot and working when he got the chance. Toward the end of the morning the point of his knife struck something hard. With a trumpet the foot came down; the trunk reached out, grasped the keeper about the arm, lifted him high in the air and carefully set him down in a corner of the stall. With sweets and caresses the keeper worked his way back to favor and cautiously cut around the obstruction, which he could see was a wire nail. But each time the knife touched the sore spot down went the foot, out came the screech, and forth reached the trunk, picking up the 180 pound man as if he were a straw and setting him into a corner as if he were a bad boy. In time, however, the head of the nail was enough cleared to permit a hold with pinchers, and the keeper was about to get these when he was gently pushed aside. The beast turned and reached with her trunk, groped across the sole with the finger-like projections at the end of it, grasped the head of the nail and with one wrench pulled out a three inch long wire nail bent about an inch from the head.

Antitobacco Smoking.

There is ample authority for the statement that before the introduction of tobacco it was customary to inhale the smoke of burned herbs for medicinal purposes. There is, however, so far as I know, no authority for supposing that pipes at all resembling our tobacco pipes were used for this purpose. Lyte says of coltsfoot:

"The perfume of the dried leaves ledde upon quicke coles, taken into the mouth through the pipe of a funnell, or tunnell, helpeth such as are troubled with the shortness of winde, and fetcheth their breath thicke or often, and do (sic) breake without danger the impostumes of the breast."

This is the usual form of the directions given in such cases, and Gerard follows it almost word for word, adding, however:

"Being taken in manner as they take tobacco, it (coltsfoot) mightily prevaileth against the disease aforesaid."

This is pretty good evidence that tobacco pipes were not in use in Lyte's time, but had been introduced in Gerard's. In Sylvester's "Tobacco Battered and Their Pipes Shattered" tobacco pipes are spoken of as a new invention:

Two smokeless Engines in this latter Age (Satan's short Circuit, the more sharp his rage)

Have been invented by too-wanted Wit, Or, rather, vented from th' Infernal Pit—Guns and Tobacco pipes, with Fire and Smoak, (At least) a Third part of Mankind to choke.

He considers the later invention the more fendish of the two.—Notes and Queries.

Books as Friends.

Best are the books that each one collects for himself, especially if their purchase entails a sacrifice. How often the pleasure that a man gets out of his books varies inversely with his power of acquiring them! None knew better than Charles Lamb the triumph of bringing home a coveted prize, a joy unshared by the outside world, a private joy if there ever is one. Many who have thus collected a small library, book by book, reading each book before they bought another, will recollect the feeling of being among strangers when a sudden accession of books comes to them from a relation's legacy or the bequest of a friend.

They set to work to make acquaintance with them, as in duty bound, but they are not of their choosing; the process is to a great extent perfunctory, and they never really catch up. For in the library as in the world a reader makes many acquaintances, but few friends, and these few will be of his own choosing.—London Academy.

The Water Discharged by a River.

Many rules and methods have been given for calculating the quantity of water discharged by a river, but the following appears to be the clearest and best: To get a mean velocity of a river or other stream find first the surface velocity in the line of current by observing the rate of feet per minute at which a floating body is carried down. As an approximation to the truth the mean velocity may be taken at four-fifths of the greatest surface velocity, and if this is multiplied by the area in feet of the cross section of the stream the product is the discharge in cubic feet per minute. For military purposes the following rule is given for ascertaining how many men a stream is adequate to supply: "Multiply the velocity per minute by the breadth, depth and 900, and this will give the number of men for which the brook is an adequate supply. The velocity of feet per minute is obtained by floating a cork, noting the distance it travels in a given time."

PANBESA'S LETTER.

An Account of an Egyptian City Thirty Centuries Ago.

Probably the oldest letter in the world is the letter of Panbesa, written fifteen centuries before Christ to his friend, Amenemhat, a scribe.

The manuscript is of perishable papyrus, and it is amazing that it should have survived for more than thirty centuries and still be legible.

It is preserved in the collection of the British museum. It has been several times translated. It presents an interesting picture of life in Egypt in the time of Rameses II. It is more in the nature of a literary production, a poem composed in celebration of the visit of Pharaoh to the city of Panbesa, than an ordinary letter of today.

Panbesa "greeted his lord, the scribe Amenemhat, to whom he bore life, health and strength," and then goes on to describe the verdant fields, the thrashing floors, the vineyards, the groves of olives, the orchards of figs, the great daily markets, with their fish and waterfowl and swarms of purchasers.

The citizens had their "sweet wine of Khemi, pomegranate wine and wine from the vineyards," and to these they added "beer of Katli."

There was music in plenty furnished by the singers of the school of Memphis.

On the whole, Panbesa seems to have been a pleasant place to live in. "The lesser folk are there equal with the great folk," and Panbesa writes that its maidens were "in holiday attire every day," with locks "redolent of perfumed oil."

THE CITY OF CANALS.

Venice and the Many Islands Upon Which It Is Built.

Venice is one of the most singular and famous cities in Europe and is built upon a cluster of islands in the lagoon. This lagoon is banked off from the Adriatic by a long, narrow sand bank which is divided into a number of islands, six in number. Inside of this sand bank and between it and the mainland is the lagoon, a sheet of shallow water. In parts of this marshy, sea covered plain islets have become consolidated into ground, firm enough to be cultivated.

And in the midst of a crowded cluster of such islands, amounting to between seventy and eighty in number, the city of Venice is built. The chief of these islands is called Isola de Rialto, or Island of the Deep Stream. The islands, in many places mere shoals, afford no adequate foundation for buildings, and the city for the most part is built upon an artificial foundation of piles and stones.

The Grand canal divides Venice into two equal parts and is the main thoroughfare for traffic and pleasure. The city is subdivided by some one hundred and forty-six small canals or water streets, and the gondola is used for the carriage. Access can also be had to various parts of the city by land, there being over three hundred bridges across canals. The Rialto, the most famous bridge, spans the Grand canal. There are also narrow lanes in among the houses.

The Overruling of a Judge.

A judge once awoke in the night to find his room in the possession of two armed burglars. Covered by the pistol of one of the marauders, the judge watched the proceedings with his usual judicial calm. One of the depredators found a watch. "Don't take that," the judge said; "it has little value and is a keepsake." "The motion is overruled," replied the burglar. "I appeal," rejoined the judge. The two burglars consulted, and the spokesman then replied: "The appeal is allowed. The case coming on before a full tribunal of the supreme court, that body is of the unanimous opinion that the decree of the lower court should be sustained, and it is accordingly so ordered." Pocketing the watch, court adjourned.

Logic and Metaphysics.

Joaquin Miller was once conversing with a learned professor who was visiting California. To the poet's query, "What do you do?" the professor answered that he held the chair of metaphysics and logic at a New England university. Whereupon the venerable Miller, with an encouraging smile, reassuringly patted the professor on the shoulder. "Logic and metaphysics, eh? Well, I suppose we must have people to look after those things, even if they don't exist."

Torture.

"The Carthaginian mercenaries," he said, "incensed their prisoners in a cement that as it hardened contracted. You can't imagine how uncomfortable this was."

"Oh, yes, I can," she answered. "I once had on a tight bathing suit when it began to shrink." — Los Angeles Times.

The Builders.

"The Egyptians were the builders," said a contractor enviously. "No wonder their monuments will endure forever. Labor was nothing to them. As you would spend a cent on a newspaper so would an Egyptian king put 10,000 men to work upon a temple. Labor, you see, cost nothing. A striking example of the Egyptian prodigality of labor lies in this fact: No less than 2,000 men were employed for three years in carrying a single stone, a stone of unexampled size, from Elephantine to Sals."

Unlucky at Bridge.

"Do you believe in this thirteen superstition?" asked Tete de Veau. "I do," replied L'Oignon. "I could never understand why I was so unlucky at bridge till I discovered that I was always dealt a hand of just thirteen."—Exchange.

A Hindoo barrister thus excused an absent client whom sickness had prevented from coming to court: "The man has fallen unwell, your honor, and he has sent a man here to say that he is lying and cannot come."

GOOD for OLD and YOUNG

August Flower keeps the children healthy and strong—
Full of vigor and frolic the whole day long,
So when Mamma needs more they rush off in high glee,
And shout to the druggist: "Please give it to me!"

Inability to get up brisk and fresh in the morning, lack of appetite, pallor, muddy complexion and poor spirits—these all indicate a disordered stomach and bad digestion—in adults and children, too. They also indicate the urgent need of taking Green's August Flower regularly for a few days.

It's a reliable old remedy for all stomach troubles, never fails to cure indigestion, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, and is a natural tonic for body and mind. n
Two sizes, 25c and 75c. All druggists

No Question About It.

There is no question but that the Lion Beer is the best beer on earth. Seventeen out of the twenty-one saloons in Paris handle Lion Beer. This shows that it is the best and most popular brand. Cannot be excelled for family use. 11oct-2m T. F. BRANNON

Louisville's Loss.

The Louisville Post says: "The announcement that Winchester has been selected as a place for a warehouse where samples of every hoghead might be stored by Society of Equity for the inspection of purchasers, has cast a gloom over the managers of the local warehouses, although there are some who do not believe that the Winchester movement can be financed, and that the tobacco eventually will be stored in Louisville, or at least a portion of it. The shipment of Burley tobacco to Louisville warehouses in recent years averaged 165,000,000 pounds per season. The 60,000 hogsheads, which it is proposed to send to Winchester, will reduce this amount to half, with the remaining portion to be divided between Louisville, Maysville and Cincinnati houses. It will mean that hundreds of thousands of dollars, which heretofore have passed through Louisville banks and the ordinary channels of trade, will be transferred in bulk to other points."

This is but a fair sample of what a Live Commercial Club can do for a town. It is acknowledged by all that the Winchester Club landed this prize.

Bourbon County Institute.

The closing session of the Teacher's Institute was held yesterday. Dr. R. N. Roark, President of the Normal School at Richmond, made a masterly address to a large audience in the Circuit Court room. The city High School, accompanied by their teachers, attended in a body.

Mrs. Sallie Barnes, representative of the State Federation of Clubs, made a brief address.

The Institute was more largely attended than last year, and was one of the most successful ever held in the county.

A delegation of the teachers will leave this morning for Frankfort, to attend the Ashland District Association of Teachers. Hon. F. L. McChesney will deliver an address there this afternoon, and Prof. Geo. W. Chapman one to-morrow.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Bourbon Institute yesterday by a rising vote:

Whereas, the Bourbon County Institute, which has been in session during this week, has come to a successful close,

Be it resolved, that the teachers of Bourbon county schools wish to express our sincere thanks to our honored Superintendent, F. L. McChesney, for his untiring effort in making our County Institute a success, for his beautiful readings and educational talks.

Second. To our most worthy and brilliant instructor, Professor M. O. Winfrey, we extend our heartfelt thanks for his normal methods of teaching, kind advice to young teachers and the interesting and able manner in which he handles each subject.

Third. To Professor R. N. Roark, of State Normal School at Richmond, we extend our thanks for his most excellent address.

Fourth. That we thank Mrs. Barnes, representative of Kentucky Improvement League for the interest taken in the rural schools, and we heartily endorse their work.

Fifth. We tender our thanks to the county officials for the use of the court house.

Sixth. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Bourbon county papers.
